Adolescents deserve youth friendly services around gender, sexuality, safer sex, sexual abuse and reproductive health. Protect their present and the nation’s future.
Confidentiality builds trust.
Trust builds confidence in a health service.
Confidence builds health seeking behaviour.

Consent form for HIV Testing

This is to state that I have been fully informed about the implications of the HIV test to be conducted on me and have been explained about the test result-positive, negative or inconclusive. All the details pertaining to HIV, its transmission, and its effects have been explained to me. Its limitations and interactions have been explained to me in a manner that I can understand. I give consent for the test to be conducted on me.

Note:
1. It may be noted that due to my inability to obtain for carrying out HIV consent procedures in hospitals, the consent is obtained from the parents.
2. In case of minor, the consent where there is a need for diagnosis of HIV for management of the patient, consent should be obtained from the parents or the nearest relative available at that time.
3. In case no attendant is available, the doctor, may be carried out.

Yes, we want health services.
No, we don’t want it based on incomplete information.
Informed consent to a service is respectful and true consent.
Medical curricula need to include issues of diverse gender identities, sexual orientations, sexual behaviours, sexually transmitted infections and sexual dysfunctions.

Universal precautions and universal access to health services go hand in hand
Sexual and reproductive health, HIV, TB, Hepatitis B and C, family planning, adolescent health and development, all are integrated health problems. What about integrated health services?
